Motions & Notions

I grew up with these guys, I consider them my first ever group of guy friends that I viewed as family. Through the strange period of COVID, we stayed home more, traveled less but ultimately that brought us together. In times when the future becomes inconceivable, falling back into your old friends reimburses nostalgia and sometimes that can just keep you going.

Oh Riva, the beautifully complex flower that you are. At the start of the year in which I met you, you were my foundational educational system in design. When I look back at how much I was able to progress with my technical skills to art and creation, It's all thanks to you, you did that, I did that, we did that. I don't think I'll ever be able to pay you back no matter how art snobby I'll get. You made me realize how important a social environment is, in how anything you do can innocently create a ripple effect on people because slowly but surely their passions will become your passions. Isn't that weird? But at the same time, so exciting, we may never stand still. Always on the go, to change and evolve.

"EVERY DAY

Have you ever met someone who's just so unapologetically themselves that you can't even be mad at them? Well, I must say that Luis you are quite the character. You are so free, at such a young age, especially in our current society, where everyone else is too busy being caught about with who said what about them. You don't give a second thought, and I commend you for it. I think you're quite the weird person, but that's a compliment, cause you are not the same as the rest, and the best thing about it, you excel at it. Maybe a lot of people don't get you, but the ones that do, they love you, and that is all that matters, because that connection is deeper than anything else, since no one is going to provoke those feelings the way you do. Luis stay true to yourself, don't drive down a different path, just grow.

Friend groups during the time of adolescence is something along the lines of shifting sand. You know where you're standing but everything else around you is moving, no one really knows where they're going, I mean how can they? But they’re all bouncing off each other with different speeds and angles, changing who they are and what they stand for.

Love, Let's talk about it. Holding tight and letting go is still a lesson I am yet to fully learn. After holding immensely tight for such a long time, it was alien to feel normal. It's as if the pressure of the thing that you've been holding is gone and all that is left is the feeling of how it felt, this remote feeling. Leaving you with the need to grasp on to something/someone as you are unable to stand on your own. But there is a lesson in everything, you learn to become friends with yourself, as when you can't stand, you learn how to crawl, crawling turns into walking, then running and the rest is from downhill.

Do we need to always know what we are doing? It's human nature to look for answers, always digging a little deeper into the whats and whys. In the long run, this feeling just adds chronic pressure, It's okay not to know, the pressure ends up being narrow-sighted. When you focus on one thing you tend to trip up and miss out on the rest, all the tiny things you didn't know you wanted to do, become missed opportunities. Sometimes accepting the things that come your way can lead to a plethora of actions, ultimately that's how I made this zine, I never knew I was going to when I pick up a camera, but when I did and took all these photos. I suddenly had a congestion of ideas of what to do with them, I rolled my dice and this is what I came up with. Don't be scared to explore, you have talents you don't even know about yet.

This project may have been created through a form of procrastination, to avoid doing school work that I didn't find interesting, at the time. This zine turned into an amalgamation of some of the lessons that I learned through 2021. A summary of all the laughing and the crying, as much as things hurt I try to made a lesson out of them, I think the ability to grow comes from those hard ravenous time. They inherently make you realize that you are in a place that you hate. But sometimes being a personalized hell is a good omen, it allows us to see starting points of the things you want or need to do in order for you to be happy, the starting points that can give you the foundation of who you are as a person.

Anyway, lets be a bit less dramatic now. If you are reading this, I just want to say thank you and that I am grateful for every experience, it has all pushed me to this moment and hopefully many more. I spent a decent amount of hours on this baby, so I hope you enjoyed it, I'm planning to make this an annual thing, so I'll see you next year!
